COLONIAL BUREAU IS FAVORED

Congress Likely to Adopt Any Plan McKinley Suggests.

Special Dispatch to The Call.

CALL HEADQUARTERS, Wellington Hotel, Washington, June 27.—Congress will probably consider favorably any suggestion the President may make that a department of colonies be established, with a Cabinet officer at its head. There is a general disposition among members of both houses who are in Washington to advocate the establishment of civil governments in all the islands as soon as possible and the relief of military authorities from all except purely military duties.

Hawaii and Porto Rico, it is believed, would offer simple problems, but the Cuban and Philippine situations are more complex. Cuba, it is generally conceded, will not be annexed to the United States without an expression of the wish by the people of the island to be so treated.

In the Philippines, it is believed, the military government must be continued until every vestige of insurrection is stamped out, although even now the fiscal affairs of the islands might very well be put under civilian control. The whole problem of future control and disposition of the former possessions of Spain is one which will have to receive the closest attention of Congress. Said Senator Mallory of Florida:

"The Hawaiians are pretty well assimilated with the American methods. It is different with the inhabitants of Porto Rico and the Philippines. One of the first things to be done in those islands, in my opinion, is to establish schools in which the English language shall be spoken. I think it would be desirable, too, at the earliest possible moment, to relieve the military authorities in all the islands of the purely civil functions which they are at present discharging."

"If we are to have a colonial system, of course, we must have a colonial department," said Representative Gardner of New Jersey. "None of our present executive departments is so organized as to aptly administer affairs of outlying possessions. I suppose the State Department is probably the best fitted to look after their interests if they are to be administered by one of the present departments, as many of the questions that will arise concerning them will be questions in which foreign nations will have more or less interest. It might be advisable to organize a bureau of colonial affairs in the State Department and put it in charge of a special Secretary of State for Colonial Affairs."

"Some men thoroughly informed as to international relations should be placed at the head of such a bureau. The name of Representative Hitt of Illinois would doubtless occur to many in public life in connection with such a position."

"The problems presented are difficult, and we will have to proceed with caution," said Representative Livingstone of Georgia. "I am inclined to think that we cannot afford to treat Porto Rico and the Philippines any less liberally than we have pledged ourselves to treat Cuba, and that we ought to offer to allow them to establish governments of their own, if they are capable of it. Of course, such governments would have to be under our general supervision and control for many years to come, if not permanently.
If the people of the Islands are capable of it, I should favor giving them territorial governments, the same as Arizona has."

"It may be found that these people, and especially the Filipinos, are not capable of any great degree of self-government, and if this is found to be the case we must give them a form of government best suited to their needs. We cannot shirk our responsibility for the future good government of the islands and for the protection of the rights of all other powers that may come into contact with their people."
